

Momma calls to the ducklings up in the tree. One by one, the day-old ducklings jump. Wheeee!

BE SURE TO
LOOK BEFORE
YOU LEAP!

Momma leads them to a nearby lake.
The ducklings follow her into the water.

A photograph of a mother duck and her duckling standing on a gravelly surface. The mother duck is larger, with brown and white mottled feathers and a dark cap. The duckling is smaller, with similar but fluffier feathers. A white text box is in the upper right corner.

She shows the ducklings where to find insects to eat. As the ducklings get bigger, they start to stretch their wings.

When the ducklings are two months old, they are ready to fly!
